Summary of Screening and Outreach Programs: Sample Year

Men's Health Network (MHN) programs conducted in a typical year are successful at reaching men and women at all ages, races, and income levels. Through different programs and events in which Men's Health Network participates:

- Approximately 200,000 men were educated on men's health in this sample year. An equal number of women, 200,000 or more, learned about men's health needs and the importance of men's health to their families.
- Over 300,000 brochures and other pieces of information were sent to locations across the nation and internationally in order to help educate communities about men's health.
- A follow-up survey of participants found that over 70% of the male participants had consulted with their physician about their results or intended to do so in the near future.

Media coverage: Mainstream visibility of men's health branded by MHN and partners increased exponentially during this period. Media initiatives reached over 100 million persons on topics ranging from good eating habits to prostate cancer. The MHN corporate web site menshealthnetwork.org received a monthly average of 1.2 million hits. Coverage of MHN programs included national media outlets such as CNN, C-Span, Parade Magazine, Fox Cable News, Spike TV, the CBS Early Show, ABC, and Parade Magazine; local media such as the Chicago Times, the New York Times, the Dallas Morning News, and the Washington Times; Hispanic media outlets such as Telemundo and Univision; and on the international level touching audiences in such countries as England, Australia and Canada.

Conferences and Symposia: MHN cosponsored a series of national and international conferences and symposia as found on the web site menshealthconferences.com. Additionally, MHN partnered with major universities to establish a series of National Men's Health Conferences designed to stimulate a multidisciplinary and multidimensional examination of men's health issues in the United States.

This summary does not include programs associated with Men's Health Month, National Men's Health Week, or Prostate Awareness Month / Prostate Cancer Awareness Month.
